Tshirt Trash Can Liner

finnyknits.com

Materials:

- Tshirt (I used a lovely Presidio 10K shirt in a women's small)
- 1 yard of shoelace string (or enough to wrap around your trash can with approx. 6" remaining)
- Coordinating thread
- Coordinating electrical tape (or whatever tape you have on hand)
- 1 cord stop
- 1 small safety pin

To make:

Turn your Tshirt inside out and sew the sleeves and neck closed. (A)

Then, with the shirt still inside out, cut off the sleeves and neck, outside the seams you just sewed. (B)

Cut into the bottom hem of the shirt, being careful not to cut into the hem's surging, and zigzag stitch at the base of the cut you just made. (C,D)

Attach a safety pin to one end of your shoelace and insert, safety pin first, into the hole you just cut in the shirt's hem. Using the safety pin as a guide, pull the string through the hemline and out the other end of the cut you made. (E,F)

Place your shirt in your trash can, former neck and sleeve ends at the bottom of the can and wrong side out, and fold the shirt's bottom hem (with the drawstring) over the top edge. (This way the right side of the shirt's hem will show on the outside of the can.) Pull the cord through the hem until the shirt fits snug on the can. You should have about 4-6" of shoelace hanging out of either side of the cut in the hem, if not, pull it through until you do and cut to fit. Wrap some tape around either end to secure the cut ends.

Insert both ends of the cord into the hole in the cord stop and tie the ends in a knot on the other side of the cord stop. (G)

Pull the drawstring tight with the cord stop. (H) You're done!
